Monkey go happy halloween

Tamara Schlesinger/ Halloween Celebration There are no monkeys with this cute primate: sleep out in the dark brown and tummy brown free swan sea pajamas felt to channel the sweet animal. A brown knit cap with felt ears and a long tail and mittens will make this cute guy a swinging success. Skill Level: Beginner Material: 1/4 yard of brown felt hot glue gun and glue stick, fiber fill stuffed brown knit cap light brown fleece sleeper pajama brown mitten direction: 1. Cut 4 3 inch circles from felt for ears. Glue each pair of ears along the edges, leaving a 2.2-inch opening. Turn right 3. Cut the lower end of each ear straight across the opening to form the base of the ear. The adhesive opening is closed. 4. Collect the base of each ear with your fingers and glue on the side of the cap. 5. Cut the 5x15 inch strip into tails. Fold half lengthways and glue long edges to one short edge. Turn right; 6. Use pajamas as a pattern to cut felt ovals large enough to cover the belly. Fold half lengthways, fold and cut. 7. Glue the belly section in front of the sleeper and align the straight edges with the zipper. 8. Dress up kids with bunks, hats and mittens. Happy Friday! some of the best posts and ideas in LifeHacker come from you, readers, and the G/O media we always read might get a committee Waterpik cordless water flosser after the appearance of Pharrell Williams at the Grammys last year. I used Photoshop to put his famous hat on my head and other friends and even a big rubber duck. People laugh and be happy to see the scene. Great response from friends and followers - so I thought I'd get my memories and laughs back by dressing up as a Halloween icon. In reproducing the icons, I had to match as close as possible - but because no one can replace this music icon - I went by the name Fakerelle as a play on words. Farrell is originally from Virginia Beach, Virginia, and is also home to Hampton Rose, Virginia. I also wanted to pay homage to him in this fun way! where I bought a happy hat I found online, a red ADIDAS jacket with white stripes, a white T-shirt, blue metallic pants from H&M, various bracelets, oversized watches, diamond earrings and boots. Assemble like a photo - and dress! Donel exploded at the party and everyone wanted a picture with Faux Rel - I felt like a celebrity! so everyone has a happy Halloween! Danny Halloween can be a lot of creepy fun for us, but with all the candy, costumes and constantly ringing the doorbell, It can be a frightening and potentially dangerous time for pets. So, read these 8 tips to keep your hairy friends safe and happy before tackling your kittens in costume or taking your dog out for some tricks and treatments. 1. Do not dress your pet. Some pets attract attention by wearing clothes and costumes. Others express their contempt in a clear and concise way. If your pet hates wearing costumes, skip them already. If your pet is wearing this Halloween costume, give him time to get used to it before the big day and make sure it fits properly and doesn't impair mobility or vision. Also, check if some of the costumes burn or stumble, or if the pet does not have a part that is likely to bite. You need to cut the eye hole of the Batman mask wide or trim the cape of that superdog costume. And make sure your pet's collar and lead fit comfortably with the outfit. And of course, never leave your pet in costume. 2. Make sure your pet tag is up to date. Even the mildest-mannered dogs can be creepy by the arrival of ghosts and goblins, so you shouldn't complete the costume without a collar with updated ID tags. Even if your pet does not join you for tricks and treatments, he must have a tag. With all the openings and closings of the door to hand out candy, there are many opportunities for creepy pets to escape. 3. Practice basic obedience commands. Goulisht's surprise may be hidden in every corner. Work on basic commands such as sit down,stay, especially leave it. Make sure your pet understands that these rules apply indoors and outdoors. 4. Keep your anxious pet away from the behavior at the front door. Some pets patiently greet children who arrive in search of sweets. If your pet likes to dash, find a quiet place far from the action and continue to occupy with interactive toys. Use a thunder shirt to calm your pet or try one of these remediesanxious dog. Try to keep your dog in the short lead for Halloween. Monkey Business Image/Shutterstock 5.Practice safety with trick-or-treatment. If your pet wants to join your family on your door-to-door walk, make sure he leads the whole time. (This applies to both dogs and cats, and for maximum safety, use a light-up collar, harness, or leash.) Keep your pet close to your side in case you encounter a trick-or-treater who is more afraid of ghosts and golden retrievers than ghouls. Bring water as well as some sweets so you can award your pet for good behavior. And don't forget those pickup bags!6. Monitor handling bags. Halloween begins an upset tammy season for people and pets. Make sure your pet is far from the Goody bag and see the stray pieces of candy that may be on the ground. Keep the ASPCA's Animal Poison Control Center Hotline at 1-888-426-4435 handy in case your dog or cat finds an unappreciated treat. 7. Use special care around the child. Pint-sized foot pitter putters can be scary for children and pets. Review the rules of how children interact safely with their pets and understand that children do not always mean happy dogs by shaking their tails. When walking on the dog's turf, take special care to pick up sweets. 8. Don't make your pet party too difficult. If you are hosting a Halloween party, take some precautions. While guests arrive, put your pet on a lead or crate and try not to get out the door. If your pet participates in the festivities, establish rules that do not feed animals with your guests. Your.
